

Martok Talks about Names

Sometimes people ask Uzzi and me how we got our names.

Martok

Monday, May 25, 2009

Sometimes people ask Uzzi and me how we got our names. Mom gave them to us. There aren't any Spots or Nannys at our farm, Mom likes really unusual names. Some of us have Star Trek names. That was my mom's favorite TV show. She especially likes Klingon names for us noble-looking, Roman nosed Boer and Nubian goats; I'm General Martok's namesake and K'ehleyr is named for a Klingon lady named K'ehleyr.

Bible Names Uzzi's name comes from the Bible; that's a good place to find unusual names. (Uzzi means "My valor, my courage, my strength.") Mom finds us Bible names in the online version of an old book called Hitchcock's Bible Names Dictionary. Aiah the ox has a Bible name too. So do the big, pushy Boer packgoats, Salem (which mean "complete or perfect peace") and Shiloh (which is the name of a city which mean "peace; abundance"). (Though, Dad sometimes calls them Sodom and Gomorrah).

Movie Characters

Some of our names are from movies, like Morgan the Goat's (an inkeeper from the "The Englishman Who Went Up A Hill But Came Down A Mountain"), and Meegosh and Kiaya's from a movie called "Willow." Book Characters Or books! Like our black ram Rumbler and his half-sister, Wren, whose names are from People of the Masks. And Fayre our Portuguese Water Dog is named for Fayre, the ghost child, in Sharyn McCrumb's The Rosewood Casket. Baa-rely Baa-rable Most of sheep have names that start or end with -baa, like Baasha, Rebaa, Shebaa, Baarley, and Baamadeus. She used to use ewe- names too (Eweland, Ewephemia, Ewedora, Ewenice, and Ewegenie). Mom likes to make people groan. The Web Helps, Too But the best place of all, she says, for finding names is a website called Names by Chinaroad. There are millions of great names linked from that website. Try it, you'll see! Mom participates at a place called the Hobby Farms Forums where lots of folks discuss their animals' names. Check it out and join in! Then your animals can have cool names too.

« More Mondays with Martok »